John Oldacre Rural Innovation Centre, Manor Farm, Harnhill,
Cirencester, GL7 5PU

Synopsis

Practical Hoof Trimming and Treatment

Aimed at the vet who already has some trimming and lame cow experience, this highly practical course aims to advance skills and knowledge and introduce new techniques. There will be a strong emphasis on the evidence base and how this can be incorporated practically into lameness management programs on farm.

The following will be covered:

- The 5 step hoof trimming method: An evidence based approach
- Appraising hoof trimming: Identifying bad practices and the impact they have
- Treatment of the lame cow: Creating protocols based on the science
- Blocking: Selecting the correct block and tips for success
- Approaching advanced necrotic lesions: Anaesthesia, analgesia, trimming and aftercare
- The team approach: Establishing vet-trimmer-farmer communication networks and working relationships

About the Speakers

Tim Carter is a professional hoof trimmer and Chairman of the Cattle Hoof Care Standards Board (CHCSB). Having grown up on a dairy farm and then worked as a herdsman he trained to become a cattle foot trimmer in 2000. Tim holds both the NPTC Level 3 and Dutch Diploma in foot trimming. He was instrumental in establishing the Royal Agricultural University Level 4 course in professional foot trimming and is the principal instructor on the course. Tim also sits on the Dairy Cattle Mobility Steering Group

Sara Pedersen is a farm animal vet focused on cattle lameness. She holds the RCVS Certificate in Cattle Health and Production and is an RCVS Recognised Specialist. After nearly a decade in farm animal practice, in 2014 she left full-time practice to focus on her two areas of interest – lameness and farmer education. Sara now spends her time providing advisory and training services to a wide range of agri-businesses. She sits on the Dairy Cattle Mobility Steering Group, is an instructor for RoMS and is involved in delivering training for the AHDB Healthy Feet Programme. She is also undertaking a part-time PhD on cattle hoof trimming techniques at the University of Nottingham.
